INTRODUCTION

The Civil Survey

THE immediate circumstances leading to the taking of the Civil Survey (1654-6) were the statutory commitments of successive Parliaments, in England, in respect of advances of money, by way of adventure, and of the arrears of pay due by the Commonwealth Government to its own officers and soldiers. These obligations were to be satisfied in allotments of Irish land and, as a preliminary measure of enquiry, a survey of the country, founded upon the authentic information of the old inhabitants was directed to be made. The barony was selected as the territorial basis of the survey, as it was to be the ultimate area in which the allotments to the interests concerned were to lie. The extensive information required was of a geographical, proprietorial and economic nature and, for this purpose, the most able of the residents were to be constituted juries. These were to be empanelled by local commissioners appointed under commission.¹

In more than one of the commissions authorizing the survey, and directing the procedure to be followed, the survey to be made was distinctly named the Civil Survey. It was to be made under the jurisdiction of special courts called Courts of Survey. These Courts were to determine and record the possessions of the proprietors of lands and the tenures and titles of their respective estates. For this purpose, power was given to summon, and examine upon oath, such persons as might be considered competent to assist in the discovery of the facts; and further, to demand the production of such evidence of title as was considered necessary. Here, an analogy may be found to those courts which take cognizance of questions of fact only, arising between man and man in his civil capacity. Allowing that the Survey was made under the Civil Authorities, and also, that it was made by the people, or their most knowledgeable men, it is suggested that the Civil Survey was so called because it would be essentially a testified record of the facts concerning the possessions of the subjects, the citizens, and declared to on oath before courts appointed to ascertain such facts.

The Civil Survey was begun in June, 1654, and commissions continued to be issued during 1655 and 1656. Through the zeal and industry of the late W. H. Hardinge, Esq., M.R.I.A., its territorial extent, the names of the commissioners, and the dates of their commissions can be ascertained.² As to the extent of the Civil Survey, it comprehended the whole of Leinster, the whole of Ulster, with the exception of the barony of Farney, in the county of Monaghan; the whole of Munster, with the exception of Clare; in Connacht, only the county of Leitrim was surveyed. This represented in all a Civil Survey of twenty-seven counties. For the remaining five, the earlier survey, called Strafford's survey, was available. According to the Book of Distribution, the Gross Survey—the Survey immediately preceding the Civil Survey, was utilised for the barony of Farney.

What has survived of the Civil Survey extends to parts of three provinces, namely, for Munster—Tipperary, Limerick, Waterford, the barony of Muskerry, Co. Cork and part of one barony in Kerry; for Leinster—Dublin (except New Castle and Upper Cross), Kildare (except Ophaley), Meath, Wexford (except Forth) and the city of Kilkenny ; for Ulster—Donegal, Londonderry and Tyrone.

From this survival of the Civil Survey, and from the Commission and Instructions which have been preserved, the functions of the commissioners, the duties of the juries, and the method of exhibiting their survey may be learned.

The functions of the commissioners included the holding of Courts of Survey, and in having their ascertained particulars engrossed in one or more books, each barony by itself. These engrossments were to be returned, attested under the hands of three or more of the commissioners, to the Surveyor-General and a duplicate, in like manner, fairly engrossed, attested and sealed up to the Registrar for Forfeited Lands. It appears from the list of the commissioners for each county, that the same set operated in several counties. Thus, in Ulster, the identical commissioners were appointed for Antrim, Armagh and Down, and likewise another similar set for Derry, Donegal and Tyrone. In the south and east the same commissioners were appointed for Waterford and Queen's County ; and again the one set for King's County and Longford.

Before the Civil Survey was begun, it was recommended that the commissioners to be appointed should be the Commissioners of Revenue "upon the place" or "other able and knowing men in the country." The names, which have been preserved, can be identified with the family names associated with the landed settlements in Ireland, for a period considerably more than fifty years prior to the Survey. In the north, particularly, the commissioners would appear to have been proprietors of land. From time to time, new commissioners were appointed, as the attestations to the Survey, which has survived, show. Mr. Hardinge's list is that of the original commissioners.

The duties of the local juries were of the widest and most responsible nature. They were to be given "in charge to inquire and find out all and every the particulars" required to be ascertained. They were, when necessary, "to view and tread the meets and bounds of the premises, and to forme all such other matters and things as are perfectly inquirable in courts of survey . . ." These juries were composed—as was indeed attested¹—of "the most able and ancient Inhabitants of the country." Their names have survived for all the baronies of two counties—Tipperary and Limerick. It is possible to identify some of these jurors as proprietors, and it would not be an unreasonable conjecture to assume, in most cases, that they were relatives of proprietors—brothers or elder sons. The juries for corporate towns appear to have been composed of the mayor, aldermen and burgesses, together with representatives of the professional and business interests. Additional jurors were added as assistants by special order. The name of the clerk appointed by two of the Limerick juries is given at the end of the lists of jurors for the barony of Pobblebrien and of the Liberties of Limerick.

Distinct juries were appointed for each barony and were selected as stated for their special knowledge of the territories within which they resided. The number comprising each jury varied. In Limerick they ranged from twenty-four to forty-five for each barony ; in Tipperary, from ten to twenty-three. For the distinct surveys to be made of Crown and Church lands the same jurors, in the latter county, were appointed.

The survey of each barony opens with a description of its meares and bounds, and, frequently, with an exposition of the nature of its soil. Its content according to the old land measure is set down, and the description not infrequently concludes with a summary of the parishes, manors and castles within the barony.¹ The boundaries of the parish follow, and at the end of each description, in the Tipperary text, there is a statement as to the value of the tithes. The lands comprising the parish, their owners, estimated area, what was profitable and unprofitable, and the respective valuations are then set out in tabular form, intersected by further descriptive particulars relating to the tenures or titles under which each denomination was held. Here the ancestral tenures of the Gael, and the Norman, existing in 1640, are exhibited and recorded, as well as titles "by patent from the Crowne."

Instances of the former will be found in the barony of Ikerrin within the text of volume one. There, the whole parish of Killea is shown to have been individually and "moyetively" distributed between numerous proprietors "all descended out of the house of O'Magher whose title they clayme (viz.) by fee from their ancestors." It is recorded of each that he was the proprietor of the fractional proportion specified by descent from his ancestors. These inherited divisions, the meares of which could "by no way be set forth distinctly" represented, doubtless, the shares to which the proprietors were entitled, individually, in the productivity of the soil. Whether the division was in pursuance of a Brehon decree, or family arrangement, is not recorded. But there is extant for certain lands in the neighbouring barony of Lower Ormond a copy of a Brehon judgment, dated 8th October, 1584, regulating the tenures thereof, and which directs "an honest, equal, brotherly division with each other according to the custom of their ancestors."²

In addition to the tenures, the description of the lands includes an account of their amenities. The area under timber, its distance from the nearest port, the presence of mills, and the varying succulence of rivers and streams, according to the season of the year, are amongst the particulars recorded³ in this section of the Civil Survey. And so, until every parish in the barony was completed.

Thus emerged the "old inhabitants" survey of their country, of its place-names, rendered phonetically into English of the time, of its ancient tenures, of its land measures and territorial divisions. It extended far beyond the discovery of forfeited lands, Crown lands, Church lands, the lands of the English and of Protestant lands, their owners and estimated areas. It revealed and preserved the memory of the ancient bounds, place-names, and antiquities of three provinces. It comprehended the detection of the wealth and valuation of the country in every form under and above the surface of the land. The Civil Survey is not limited to defining the boundaries of forfeited lands; it records the boundaries of baronies "and the course that the said meets and bounds doe runne." It gives independent dealings with lands, transfers by sale, bequests by testament, mortgages, and marriage settlements. It is a description of the physical features of the land from the highest to the lowest denominations—a geography of its mountains, its high roads, its rivers and streamlets, and simultaneously a record of the ownership and title to the lands which these natural boundaries surrounded or divided.

The purpose of the survey has been stated by Mr. Hardinge: "Many persons are under an impression that the Civil Survey was designed as the basis of the satisfactions afterwards made to the soldiers for arrears of pay due to them, and that it was rejected by the Government in consequence of complaints of its inaccuracy. Such an impression is altogether erroneous. This survey was not designed for the purpose assumed. It was a preliminary work, essential to the discovery and description in a legitimate and solemn manner of the forfeited lands, and from which lists technically called 'terriers' were afterwards supplied to the several surveyors for their admeasurement and mapping.

"It was by these maps, and their index sheets, when approved by the Surveyor-General, and sanctioned by Government, and not by the Civil Survey, that the land satisfactions were made to the soldiers and adventurers, as well as to the other interests afterwards let in by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation."

In the indexing of each barony, a uniform method was adopted throughout. The proprietors were distinguished by separate indexes, that of the English frequently coming first, and the Irish next. An index of the lands followed these¹, and then an index of "Observations."² The place-names, however, in the barony and parish descriptions were not indexed; nor were the personal names referred to in the descriptive particulars relating to the title to lands by descent, through patent or conveyance. A full index will be forthcoming with the complete publication of the text for each county.

The pagination, in one respect, was also uniform. Each page was numbered at the top of the right-hand corner, and the index was based on this pagination. In some baronies, however, there is recorded a second pagination, on alternate pages. It occurs either at the bottom or side of the page, and suggests a reference to the folios in which the first entries may have been made.

As directed, a number of the commissioners, usually three, attested or certified the survey of each barony. Their names appear at the end, appended to statements certifying how and when the Survey was made. A statement as to the holding of the Courts of Survey, followed by the names of the jurors, precedes the description of each barony in Tipperary. The names of the Limerick jurors, "sworn and empanelled to enquire and return an exact Survey" appear after those of the Commissioners at the end of the baronies. The jurors for County Dublin are described as "the most knowing and sufficient men," though their names are not returned. The jurors for Waterford though not specified, are described as "the most able and ancient inhabitants of the country." The northern commissioners certified that the Survey was taken by them, and recorded the date.

When completed, as already indicated, the Civil Survey was to be forwarded to the Surveyor-General, and a duplicate sent to the Registrar for Forfeited Lands. The former set, according to Mr. Hardinge, unquestionably reached its destination. He refers to the statement of Surveyor-General Stone that it was consumed in the fire of 1711. "This statement implies," says Mr. Hardinge, "that the set was complete, and in this office when the fire occurred, but the statement is inaccurate. A large portion of the set had been removed from the Surveyor-General's office . . . before the close of the year 1667—and was not afterwards restored." He then refers to the discovery, in 1817, by the Irish Record Commissioners of eighty-four "original Civil Survey Barony Books" in the library of Viscount Headfort at Kells, County Meath.

The subsequent history of these books is related in the Statement (see page xxxix) of the late Mr. M. J. McEnery, M.R.I.A., Deputy Keeper of Records, and Keeper of State Papers, 1914-1921. Acquired by the Commissioners of Woods, Forests and Land Revenues, they were deposited in the Quit Rent Office, and ultimately transferred to the Public Record Office. Mr. McEnery points out the importance of this addition to the latter office, where it was available for public inspection. Copies of the volumes were then supplied by the Record Office to the Quit Rent Office. A separate statement shows the counties and baronies which these represent (see page xl). With other documents from the Quit Rent Office collection these copies have now been lodged in the Public Record Office.

As to the duplicate set of Civil Survey barony books, destined for the office of the Registrar of Forfeited Lands, Mr. Hardinge says: "The set of barony books, which must be presumed to have reached the office of Registrar of Forfeitures, should have been transferred to the Auditor-General, as the other records of that office were, under the 60th section of the Instructions annexed to the Act of Settlement, about the year 1678; but there exists no evidence whatever from which to infer such a transfer; and I am of opinion that this set of barony books were appropriated antecedently to that year by some person officially, or otherwise, closely connected with the Office of Registrar of Forfeitures; and that at this moment they are reposing in some private library . . ."

It will have been observed from the first paragraph above that Hardinge had also contended that a large portion of the Civil Survey had been removed from the Surveyor-General's Office and he refers significantly to the discovery of the Headfort collection. Certain features however of the Wexford Civil Survey to which attention is drawn in the separate introduction (p. xiv) strongly induce the view that at least this unit of the Headfort set was derived from the Office of the Registrar of Forfeited lands.

The hope expressed in 1862 by Mr. Hardinge, that the publication of his Memoir, on the Manuscript and other Surveys of Ireland, would evoke inquiry, especially in England, may now be renewed.

The legal framework within which the Civil Survey was begun and completed will now be referred to briefly.

The source of authority for the taking of the Civil Survey, resides in that code of English Acts and Ordinances—passed between the years 1642 and 1653—contemporaneous with the wars begun in Ireland towards the close of 1641. A survey of forfeited lands was contemplated from the outset, and the opening Act of the code prescribed the measures to be taken when the English Parliament should declare the existence of conditions which would permit of the survey being made.¹ By an Act passed in August, 1652, it was declared that a position had been reached when a settlement of the Irish nation might be effected.² "Early in 1653, when the Commissioners of the Parliament of England, for the affairs of Ireland, felt themselves in a condition to proceed with a survey of the forfeited lands, they had, as a necessary preliminary, to decide upon the manner of its execution. The ancient modes known in law were two:—1st, by inquisition out of the Chancery or Exchequer, after the precedents of the surveys of the Desmond forfeitures; 2nd, by commission under the great seal, after the precedent set by James I. in the survey of the six escheated counties. The latter mode was adopted."³ On the 22nd June, 1653, a Commission, with Instructions, under the Great Seal of England⁴ was addressed to Charles Fleetwood, Esq., Lieutenant-General of the Army in Ireland, Edmund Ludlow, Esq., Lieutenant-General of the Horse, Miles Corbet, Esq., and John Jones.⁵ It constituted them Commissioners for putting in execution the instructions, thereto attached, for a perfect survey and admeasurement of various classifications of lands. They were authorised to appoint Surveyor-Generals, and "Surveyors under them," and "to constitute a fit person of integrity for the Office of Registrar." This Commission, with Instructions, was ratified and confirmed by the Act for the "Satisfaction of Adventurers and Soldiers" passed on the 26th September, 1653.⁶

The Instructions, accompanying this Commission, prescribed the procedure to be followed, and the personnel to be employed in the three surveys directed to be taken—namely, a survey by inquisition, a survey by admeasurement, and what was called a "Gross Survey." Under-Surveyors, to be appointed by the Surveyors-General, were directed to "enquire and find out" the landed interests of the inhabitants, and also what were Crown lands and Church lands; for this purpose they were empowered to hold Courts of Survey. For the survey by admeasurement "persons skilled in the art of surveying" were to be appointed, subject to the approval of the Commissioners, under the warrant of the Surveyors-General.

On the grounds of the utmost urgency, the "Gross Survey" though the last to be named, was directed to be made first, irrespective of what the instructions provided, as to the other surveys. Commissions for this survey were issued, simultaneously, in August, 1653, to the public officers acting as commissioners of revenue, within the fifteen precincts into which the country had been divided. So unsatisfactory, however, were the returns from the Gross Survey,⁷ that official directions were given for the taking of abstracts from the Strafford surveys, and such "other papers, returns, or county books," as were available. The Gross Survey continued, however, until the following year, when it was suddenly stopped.¹ Then, by an order, dated the 14th April, 1654, addressed to the Surveyor-General, Benjamin Worsley, Esq., the other surveys, authorised by the Commission, with Instructions, of 22nd June, 1653, were directed to be begun.²

The initial proceeding under this order would appear to have been the consideration of the instructions to be issued for the making of the Civil Survey, and the Survey by admeasurement. A committee was appointed for the purpose, by the General Council of Officers, and it reported on the 11th May, 1654.³ This report was mainly concerned with the principles and the methods to be adopted and followed in the admeasurement of estates and their surrounds. As to the Civil Survey, the procedure had been already fully indicated by the Instructions of June, 1653, and the Committee then added nothing to these save a recommendation on the subject of the Courts of Survey. For "their better performance," the Committee advised that the instructions to be issued should be directed to the "Commissioners of Revenue upon the place" or "other able and knowing men in the country." Whether by virtue of this recommendation or not, Commissions, with Instructions, began to be addressed, in the following month, to sets of Commissioners for each county in Ireland, excepting the counties of Clare, Galway, Mayo, Roscommon and Sligo. With regard to these counties "the Strafford survey, then extant, contained as specific an account of the lands, their proprietors and possessors, as any new work of the kind could do."⁴

The sequence in which the Commissions, with Instructions, were sent to the local Commissioners was based on the priority of the appropriations of the counties of Ireland specified in the Act of Satisfaction of September, 1653. Ten counties, in the first place, were set aside for the satisfaction of the Adventurers and Soldiers, and the earliest Commissions, with Instructions, were issued in respect of these counties. Fortunately, specimens have been preserved and are reproduced (see page xxxiii). It is from the examination of these that the magnitude of the Civil Survey will be learned.

Within this legal framework, the Civil Survey was begun. The last date of which there is any record for the issue of a commission is the 1st September, 1656, for county Monaghan. Eighteen commissions were issued in 1654, covering the same number of counties. There is strong evidence to support the opinion that the survey of these was completed before the summer of 1655, and a statement by Mr. Hardinge on this point will be quoted presently. Two-thirds of the work would, therefore have been completed in about twelve months. For the remaining nine counties, seven Commissions were issued between 1655 and 1656; the commissions for two counties—Cavan and Fermanagh, have not been found. While no definite date can be assigned for the completion of the Civil Survey, the year 1656 may be said to have witnessed the issue of the final Commissions under which its far-reaching enquiries were made.

It has already been stated that in more than one of the commissions, the surveys to be taken were distinctly named "The Civil Survey,"⁵ This is the specific and official appellation. Mapped admeasurements, contemporaneous with the Civil Survey, were at times also brought within this designation. "It was the unsatisfactory nature of the survey taken under this Order—the so-called Civil Survey—which led Petty to offer to undertake a more exact admeasurement of the forfeited lands in Ireland."¹ This Order has been previously noticed. It was the Order dated 14th April, 1654, which, on the failure of the Gross Survey, directed the taking of the other surveys authorized in June, 1653. In pursuance of this Order, and by virtue of the Act of September, 1653, two distinct sets of instructions were issued; one to the local Commissioners, for the taking of the Civil Survey, and the other, some time later, to the surveyors who were to admeasure the forfeited lands according to certain rules. The Report of the Committee appointed "to consider the business of the Surveys," dated September 24th, 1654, clearly shows that it was the considered inadequacy of these rules that led to Petty's proposals "for a more exact admeasurement."² The Civil Survey had been placed in other hands four months previously, and proceeded to a conclusion, in the manner first appointed, as what has survived of it definitely attests. Neither in authorship nor correction can Petty be identified distinctly with it. Rather his total dependence on the Civil Survey is a distinguishing feature of its history.

The Instructions to the Local Commissioners directed that out of the surveys taken, abstracts containing the names of lands, and their boundaries, should be delivered to those authorized to make the admeasurements. Petty's contract of the 11th December, 1654, left this procedure undisturbed.³ But time was the essence of this contract, so far as Dr. Petty was concerned. He had contracted to perform the work of admeasurement "within one year and one month next" after the date of his agreement. Immediately pressure began to be employed for one return or another. On the 20th December, it was ordered "that all commissioners which are employed in the civil survey do take care with all speed to furnish Dr. Petty or his assigns, with the abstracts of all the forfeited lands in each county and barony . . . to the end the said Dr. may be directed unto all and every of the said lands to be surveyed by him."⁴ On the 25th December, the "Committee touching the manner of Surveys" requested the Lord Deputy to obtain from the Committee "for the Civil Survey" an estimate of all the forfeited lands both profitable and unprofitable.⁵ On the 12th February following a further Order was issued: "Ordered, that it be referred to the committee for removing obstructions in the surveys undertaken by Dr. Petty, to meet . . . and consider of the proceedings of the commissioners for the civil survey, and how the concealments of lands may be remedied, how far the present surveys may be of use, and what course is to be taken for having true and full civil surveys returned to remain of record for public use. And they are to treat with the commissioners-general concerning abstracts to be given of the civil survey."⁶ The explanation of the urgency that had arisen is manifest from Dr. Petty's "Humble Remonstrance concerning his extraordinary Grievances."⁷

“And first,” he complained, “your petitioner sheweth that through the backwardness of the Civil Survey, and want of abstracts, he was exceedingly damnified. At first, that having none at all ready at the first sealing of his contract hee, notwithstanding, out of zeale to promote the service sett out sixty instruments to enquire of the country, which proved soe confused, as that the whole charge of what was done untill the latter end of February was wholly lost.” That Dr. Petty required more than abstracts is evident from the continued expression of his grievances, thus :

“For want of the bookes of the Civil Survey your petitioner hath been often put to the trouble and charge of two or three admeasurements instead of one.” And, finally, he complained : “Your petitioner after long sollicitation finding noe hopes of having the civil survey of the countyes of Carlow and Wicklow, hath notwithstanding adventured to survey and measure them . . . to the end of the season for doeing the same might not slipp and bee lost, to the prejudice of the Commonwealth and the Army.” In whatever quarter the delay may have rested, it can scarcely be ascribed to those charged with the taking and attesting of the Civil Survey. That, for the County Tipperary, for example, was completed, with the exception of two baronies, before the end of October, 1654, two months before the signing of Dr. Petty’s contract. This will be seen from the separate statement on this county (see Vol. I., page xi). According to Mr. Hardinge, who had all the records at his disposal, “the Civil Survey of most of the baronies included within the said articles (Petty’s agreement) was returned . . . before March 1655, and many of them before the date of Petty’s articles of undertaking ; so that no impediment interposed to prevent his making an immediate commencement of the admeasurement and mapping work.” This certainly clears the jurors and local commissioners. It may be pointed out, however, that the Civil Survey was required for another purpose at this time. In the same month that Dr. Petty’s agreement was made—December, 1654—commissioners commonly called the Athlone commissioners, were appointed in connection with the Transplantation proceedings. “As the whole nation was declared guilty of rebellion it lay on each claimant to prove the extent and nature of his estate. To check the claimants the commissioners were furnished with, amongst other books, the Civil Survey.”¹

Whatever may have been the cause of the “backwardness” of which Dr. Petty complained, his “grievances” may be interpreted, perhaps, as being amongst the earliest tributes to the Civil Survey. It is to be apprehended, however, that if some of the surveys were to prove less informative in descriptive detail than others, the deficiency was to be related to the pressure residential either in Petty’s contractual obligations for the performance of his own survey, or in the requirements of “The Court of the Commissioners for the Claims and Qualifications of the Irish.”

The Civil Survey of Wexford.

THE Civil Survey of Wexford was made under the authority of commissions dated 26th July and 1st December, 1654.¹ Though the commissions and instructions are not available, specimens of those issued for another county have been preserved and are included in this volume (p. xxxiii). It may be presumed that the terms of the commission and instructions were alike for all counties in respect of which they were issued. Some particulars of the original Wexford commission as to the names of commissioners, the baronies to be surveyed, the date of the commission and instructions have been preserved by Hardinge in his paper on Surveys in Ireland 1640-88.² According to this authority the Civil Survey of all Wexford baronies was directed to be made: Ballaghkeen, Bantry, Bargo, Forth, Gorey, Scarawalsh, Shelburne and Shelmaliere. With the exception of that of Forth, the present volume includes all the foregoing baronies. While the Survey of Ross town and liberties and Enniscorthy are also included that of Wexford town is not forthcoming. For this an alternative source will in due course be indicated.

Though the text for Forth barony is not available, evidence that the Survey was made is afforded by the Wexford Book of Survey and Distribution compiled subsequent to the Restoration. Particulars there recorded of proprietorship within this region, as at the year 1641, with details of lands and acreages have been abstracted and are printed as Appendix A (p. 295). It may be added that the origin and history of Books of Survey and Distribution, with an account of the various surveys and other documents of record from which they were compiled are set forth in the Introduction to the Roscommon volume—the first in this series—published by the Irish Manuscripts Commission. In addition to the abstract given in the Appendix there is also printed in the course of these notes (p. xx) the Civil Survey barony boundary description of Forth. This has been derived from the Wexford volume of the set of Books of Survey and Distribution in the Annesley collection, microfilmed in recent years by the National Library.

The distinct Civil Survey made of each of the baronies was attested by one or more commissioners—the names of the jurors have not been preserved—appointed to hold Courts of Survey in the baronies of the county. The attestation appears on the last page of the indexes to each barony and is the same throughout :

“ Wexford 29 January 1654

“ I doe attest the aforementioned survey to bee according to the nearest estimate (in each particular) that could be obtained by me both from the Jury and other the best information and observation which I had or could procure the same being carefully examined and is returned by me.

This name, which is also rendered "Rradinge" in the text through what is likely an error in transcription, does not appear in Hardinge's list of Wexford Civil Survey commissioners comprising: Ambrose Andrews, Barth Hussey, Thos Dowse, Edmd Thomlins, Math. Slothard, Edwd. Withers—"and others." Mr. Bradinge's name, however, appears elsewhere.

In the British Museum (Add. MSS. 4765) are copies of the Civil Survey for the three baronies of Ballaghkeen, Bantry and Shelburne. The attestation clause is the same as in the present text save that it is expressed in the plural above the signatures of four commissioners one of whom was "Ed. Bradinge." The names of the other three attesting commissioners may be noted: "Barth. Hussey, Am. Andrews and Ed. Withers." Regarding the second name Hore in his *History of Wexford*³, who, incidentally does not appear to have been aware of the existence of the Civil Survey in the Headfort collection, has the following note: "Mr. Ambrose Andrews filled many positions. He was one of the Commissioners of the Revenue and a Justice of the Peace; he compiled with others a Civil Survey of the county and was appointed one of the commissioners for examining the delinquency of the Irish proprietors."

It will be recalled that a duplicate of the Civil Survey was directed to be made and sent to the Registrar for Forfeited Lands. The appearance of the names of four commissioners in the British Museum copies suggests that these were made from the set sent to the Surveyor-General and that the present text represents the duplicate. In this connection attention is directed to the caption "Wexford 2" on the opening page of the barony of Shelburne (p. 165). It has been noted in the first introduction to this volume (p. vii) that Hardinge had expressed the view that this duplicate set had been "appropriated" before 1678 by some person associated with the office of Registrar of Forfeitures, and also that a large portion of the Surveyor-General's set had been removed before 1667.

The caption indicated at Shelburne barony and the divergence in the commissioners' names are the only direct evidence, to our knowledge, indicating that the Headfort collection, or part thereof, represented the duplicate set of the Civil Survey.

Commissioners were directed to return "distinctly by themselves" the Surveys of Forfeited lands, Church lands and Crown lands. The distinct return of lands within the first classification was achieved, and this applies to the inquisition for all counties, by the description "Irish Papist" written after the names of the proprietors coming within that qualification. Unforfeited lands, for the most part, were distinguished by their individual proprietors being described as either "English Protestant" or "Protestant."

The separate return of Church lands, including glebes, is not forthcoming. Evidence of its having been compiled is afforded by textual notes throughout the baronies to which further reference will be made. Particulars of tithes and impropriations were also doubtless the subject of a return, since they are not specified in the present text; it is not unlikely that such particulars were included with those of the Church lands.

Otherwise the information called for by Government was furnished barony by barony, as the present volume attests. It may be noted that though the value of the lands as they were "worth to be let" is given in respect of the year 1640, no year is mentioned for the proprietorship specified in the first column of the statistical sections. This must be regarded as "1641" in accordance with the Commission issued for the taking of the Survey.

The pagination of each barony is distinct in itself, and on it was based the indexes appearing at the end of the respective baronial returns. Distinct indexes are provided of proprietors within the classifications "Irish Papists" and "English Protestants" and similarly of their respective lands, castles and so forth. These indexes are preceded by "General Abstracts" distinguishing the estimated acreages and the qualities thereof—arable and pasture—belonging to the proprietors in the classifications already specified. Care must be exercised in the use of these indexes, which do not include the names of persons who were in receipt of chief rents or who were lessees or mortgagees. For example on page 129 the Bishop of Ferns is stated to be in receipt of a chief rent of "eight pence" in respect of the lands of Tomhagger from Richard Wadding. Likewise the summaries of estimated acreages of the lands of each parish are not always to be accepted without collation with the text. Some errors are obvious as in the instance of the parish of Mallrankin (Mulrankin).⁴ In this connection the text itself distinguishes the acreages of each denomination according to its agricultural use—arable, pasture and so forth; in the statistical abstracts, however, the arable and pasture acreages are grouped, otherwise the total figures in either of these classifications, though merely estimates, would be available at a glance. The admeasured acreages of the lands forfeited (in plantation measure) may be learned from the Books of Survey and Distribution; instances examined showed that these were nearly a fourth greater sometimes considerably more than in the present text.

In one connection the usual format of the returns is extended. Within the baronies of Gorey (p. 10), Bargy (pp. 127–38) and throughout the whole of Shelburne (pp. 169–89) the text furnishes an additional column for names of lessees and mortgagees.⁵ While such particulars are infrequent in the first two baronies, they are entirely absent from the last; many blanks will also be found throughout the Shelburne section for the amounts of chief rents indicated as payable. These particulars are also wanting in the British Museum copies with which the present text has been collated.

It is held that the Civil Survey expressed for the first time the ecclesiastical unit of the parish as a civil circumscription. Certainly in the extensive grants of lands made on the occasion of the plantation of north Wexford (1611), some fifty years previously, their parochial location was not given. Excluding the town of Wexford, the present volume contains returns for 129 parishes; these comprise the eight baronies of the county with the towns of Ross and Enniscorthy. In the two baronies of Bargy and Forth the parishes are wholly contained; in the remaining baronies many parishes have a dual location being situated partly in one barony and partly in another; in other instances the remaining portions of the parishes are in adjoining counties. Of the 129 parishes so returned, 17 extend into more than one barony of the county and 7 more into the baronies of other counties. For convenience of reference a list showing the baronial locations of these "part" parishes is printed at the end of these notes.⁶

In the History of the Diocese of Ferns by W. H. Grattan Flood there is printed a list (p. xxii) of parishes existing at the epoch of the Religious Revolution.⁷ Collation of their names with those of the Civil Survey show substantial agreement. There are examples however in both texts of the absence of corresponding names. This may perhaps be explained by unions of parishes effected between the Reformation and the date of the Civil Survey. Some names of parishes of the period of the former event not appearing under such names in the Civil Survey may be given, as also within brackets, the Civil Survey parishes by which they are there represented or included. (1) Clonleigh (Templeudigan parish, Bantry barony, p. 208); (2) Killag (Ballymagire Parish, Bargy, p. 149); (3) Killesk (Dunbrody parish, Shelburne, p. 187); (4) Kilsanlan (Old Ross parish, Bantry, p. 205) and (5) Templecobin (Rossdroit, same barony, p. 216).

Instances of names of parishes returned by the Civil Survey and not found in the list of the diocesan history quoted above are "Killuring" and "Chapel Caran" in the barony of Shelmaliere (pp. 103 and 104) represented by the present parish of Killurin; "Ballynaghallagh—Ballinegalla," barony of Bargy (p. 143) now Taghmon; the parish of "Ballymitty" in Shelmaliere (p. 89) is a further instance. Nor, it may be added, do the Civil Survey parish names last-mentioned within quotation marks appear in the Regal Visitation of 1615 printed by Hore in his final volume (pp. 266-74). Here again unions may explain the absence of conformity.

A most interesting feature of the return to this Visitation is the specification of the parishes within their seven rural deaneries: Forth, Bargy, Shelburne, Shelmaliere, Duffry, Oday and Shillelagh. The first four are the names of baronies returned by the present text,⁸ but it is not to be assumed that in all instances the parochial contents of the deaneries are the same as those of the baronies. The deanery of Bargy closely approximates to the barony of that name and similarly, though to a lesser extent, the deanery and barony of Shelburne. Within the deaneries of Forth and Shelmaliere there would appear to have been many parishes belonging to baronies other than of these names. The deanery of the Duffry included the parishes of Enniscorthy and Templeshanbo in the barony of Scarawalshe (p. 257) with the parishes of "Scoby et Rosdroit" and Killane in the barony of Bantry (p. 197). Finally, the deanery of Oday included parishes of the baronies of Gorey, Ballaghkeen and Scarawalsh; parishes within the last two baronies also formed with others the deanery of Shillelagh.¹⁰ These three baronies, known as the Irish baronies, had been constituted some ten years before the date of the Regal Visitation.¹¹

Attention may now be called to some names of parishes returned by the Civil Survey which do not appear on the Ordnance Survey maps or in the Census returns. The parishes within which they appear in such publications are added within parentheses: St. Imoge, barony of Bargo (p. 152) (Bannow), Keneigh, Shelburne barony (p. 176) (Tintern); Carnagh, barony of Shelburne (p. 186), (Tellarought).

When collating parishes shown on the O.S. maps or in former Census returns with those of the Civil Survey it should be recalled that legislation of the 17th and 18th centuries empowered the union and division of parishes and the creation of new parishes, the first enactment in this connection being of the year 1662.¹² Of the papers relating to these proceedings formerly in the Public Record Office, it would appear that the indexes made in 1868, under the direction of Sir Bernard Burke, alone survive.¹³ The creation of the new parish of Newtownbarry is here indicated by a reference to the separation in 1775-6 of certain townlands belonging to the parish of Templeshanbo, the largest parish in the diocese. Likewise the creation in 1830 of the new parish of Ballycarney from parts of the parishes of Ferns, Templeshanbo and Newtownbarry. Out of Templeshanbo also was formed in 1805 the parish of Monart.

In the final volume of Hore's History of Wexford (p. 295) there is printed an account "of the parishes of every description or denomination" of the Diocese furnished in

¹¹ For the location of territories it will be convenient to have in conjunction with the present text the inquisition of 18th Jan. 3rd year of James I directing the formation of these baronies: "The 5 baronies following in the co. Wexford, commonly called the English baronies of the said county, to wit, of Foarte, Bargo, Shirbirne, Shilmalyre and Bantry, with Mounck's lands, and all the lands from the top of the mountain of Slewcarrahe unto the river of the Barrow, on the east side of the said mountain and river, being all parcels of the said Barony, and the territories thereof, commonly called the Irish countries, shall be divided into 3 several baronies to be named and distinguished as followeth:—the Barony of Ballaghkeyne, containing the Morowes and the Inch in the Morowes, McDamore's country, and all the ecclesiastical lands within the said barony belonging to the late priory of Glascarigs which barony is bounded on the [] by the sea, on the south side to the barony of Shilmalyre, on the west to the river of the Slane, and on the north to Kylhobucke and Kynselaghs: the barony of Goory, containing [] and McVadock's country and Broyckenaghe, and the spiritual lands called Farren-Murry, on the east side of the Banne, which barony is bounded on the east side to the mayne sea and McDamer's country, on the south side to the Morowes and Kilhobucke, on the west side to Shillelagh, and Cossher, and on the north side to the shires of Arcloe; the barony of Scarrewailsh containing the Duffry the lordship of Eniscorthy, together with Farrenvarse, Farrenhamon, Farrenoneile, Fasaghslawboy, Clunhanricke, the lordship of Ferna, Kylcolnelyen, Kilhobrucke, and the bishop's lands both sides of the Banne, which barony is bounded on the south side with the Barony of Bantry and Mounks lands to the top of Barreskuller, on the west to the top of the mountain of Stwoleyne, and so along to the river of Clody, and from thence to the Slane, and up along the river of Dyrre unto Carnowe, on the north to the Kynsellaghe's and McVadock's country, and on the east side to the Broyckenaghe and Morowes. The barony of Ballaghkeyne aforesaid containeth in McDamore's country 13 marte lande, but the Abbeyland of Glascarige, or the lands of Morowes and Inch, the jury know not how to devide either by marte lands or quarters. The barony of Goory containeth in Kinsellagh and the temporal lands of Boyckenagh, 20 marte lands, and in McVadock's country 7 marte lands, but the contents of the lands in Farrenmorrey the jury know not, either by marte lands or quarters. The barony of Skerrewailshe containeth in Kylhobucke 6 marts, in Kylcownelyen 5 marks, in Clanhanricke, Farrenhennon, Farrenoneile and Fasaghslawboy 20 marts, but the contents of the lordships of Fernes, Enescorthy, and the bishop's lands the jury cannot divide either by marte lands or quarters. IV, cap. 43 directs: "That . . . it shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant with the assent of the Privy Council . . . to divide old parishes or to separate any parish or part of a parish heretofore united . . . and to unite parishes . . . and to erect such divided or united parishes or parts of parishes into new parishes with all parochial rights." A feature of the barony descriptions of the present text, which should prove helpful in the study of the old topography of the county, is the specification of the distances in "large" miles, presumably Irish, between the places forming the boundaries. Usually the description begins by stating the distance from the castle of Wexford of the nearest part of the relative barony. This feature also characterises the parish boundaries of southern baronies ; in Bantry there is the added information of the extent of the circuits of the barony and its parishes. While the northern baronies of Ballaghkeen and Scarawalsh are disappointing in this connection, the description of Gorey provides linear particulars. Here, for example, it is recorded that the "Great Hill Thorhill being both high and rocky" is within half a mile of the "great sea."¹⁴

An unusual and, at first sight, mysterious boundary location occurs in the Bargy barony and parish descriptions ; "The river . . . leading northward and dividing the lands of Rosgarland . . . and the lands of Colebrooke in the peere of Kilkevan . . ." (p. 125), Parishes likewise are stated to be located within a particular peere ; Balleconnick parish (p. 138) "is commonly reputed part of the peere of Kilmanan." The word is occasionally rendered peare.

According to the description of Forth barony (p. xx) that region was divided into "twelve Peeres six whereof (nearest the sea) are commonly distinguished and called by the name of the Six Lower Peeres, the other six toward the mountaine are called the Upper Peeres . . . some of which Peeres consists of three parishes, some two or one."

What was signified may be inferred by analogy from the description of Bantry (p. 199) : "This barony was by ancient custom divided into six divisions or quarters containing in all 89 plowlands . . . In each quarter whereof are several parishes and part of other parishes."

Vocabularies of the well-known dialect peculiar to Bargy and Forth have not proved helpful,¹⁵ and if anything one of the chorographic accounts of the latter barony written for Sir William Petty in 1684 by Robert Leigh, of Rosegarland, increases rather than clarifies the problem.¹⁶ Here the word used is "Peece" : "The barony of Shilburne is divided into quarters or peeces (as they are termed in that country), and is the same thing with Hundreds in England, viz., the Peece of Dunbrody, the Peece of the Hooke, the Peece of Sleuculter and the Peece of Tintern."

The Civil Survey rendering of the word peere is of frequent repetition and further it has the already noted alternative spelling peare. After the word peeces in the foregoing quotation there is the remark in parenthesis "as they are termed in that country" thus emphasising an unusual description. This could scarcely apply to the common word then in use meaning piece. The explanation may be that in the transcription of Leigh's text the letter r was misread as c or alternatively that the transcriber being naturally puzzled assumed from the context that "peece" was intended.

¹⁵ Glossary of the old dialect of the English colony in the baronies of Forth and Bargy by Jacob Poole : ed. Wm. Barnes : London, Smith, 1867. This vol. includes a relative contribution by Dr. Russell, Pres. of St. Patrick's College, Maynooth. There is also a vocabulary printed in the Dublin Society vol. for Wexford.

Regarding the Forth dialect Colonel Solomon Richards who also wrote an account of this region for Petty said "Whoever hath read old Chaucer . . . will better understand the Barony of Forth dialect than either an English or Irishman that never read him though otherwise a good linguist."¹⁷

Apart from such specifications of internal baronial divisions the Civil Survey regional delineations rarely depart from the routine naming of boundary points. An exception, however, may be noted in the description of the "Great Island," now a peninsula, in the parish of Kilmokea, Shelburne barony (p. 167) :

"At the east point of the said island meets those three incomparable sisters commonly called the three famous rivers of Barrow, Nore and Syure whose lovely embracements make the harbour deep and spacious safe for navigation which plentifully enricheth the several parts of this nation by traffic and commerce with shipping both foreign and domestic"

This island had various names including at an early period that of Insula Hervey (Hervey's Island) and is thus said to have commemorated Hervey de Montmorency, who had accompanied his uncle, Strongbow, to Ireland.¹⁸

Not to be confused with the foregoing is another "Great Island," returned within the parish of Ardkeavan (Ardcavan) in the barony of Shelmaliere (p. 113). There is here at Sir Thomas Esmonde's proprietorship of this island and other lands, the interesting textual note : "This made choice of for General Moncke."

No reference, it may be added, to the Saltee islands, south of Bargy, has been found in the Survey.

Likewise in describing parish boundaries, also rich in place-names, the surveyors occasionally permitted themselves a little diversion to note an historical event or to attempt a fanciful etymological explanation as at Fethard, Shelburne barony (p. 172) :

"The Cunny Borrough Land [of Fethard] extends due south a myle to a small pill or inlett of the sea which ebbs and floweth halfe a mile above the Towne of ffethard, on the other side of the same Inlett the land extends half a mile farther south to a peece of High Ground commonly called Bagg and Bunn, Remarkable for the ruins of the fortifications of the first English Conquerors of this nation yett remaining there . . . thence due north a large halfe mile to ye Brooke of Clonlard . . . from the said Brooke the land extends due east a quarter of a mile to another Brooke at a ffoard commonly called Pull—for a name retained (as is credibly spoken) since the first English Conquerors landed who marching that way cried Pull—for meaning Pull forward for victory from the said Pull—for the land of Dungulph extends itself to the Castle of Dungulpe . . ."¹⁹

* * * *

The agricultural economy of the county, the crops grown and descriptions of the soil are outstanding features of the Wexford Civil Survey. Exclusive of the barony of Forth, some 64 mills are returned within the rural regions ; of these 19 belonged to Bargy.

¹⁷ Jrnl. R.S.A.I. vol. VII, p. 86.

¹⁸ Hore : History of Wexford, vol. II, p. 197. There are numerous references to the "Great Island" in Cal. Ormond Deeds, ed. Curtis, vols. IV and V.

¹⁹ Hore, vol. IV, p. 336, quotes this description taken from the Down Survey, adding a note that "Pillford" was evidently the place referred to. In the same vol. (p. 429) Hore prints a contribution from Goddard H. Orpen : "Baginbun Head is a rock-bound promontory . . . A persistent tradition has linked its name with the landing in Ireland of Robert FitzStephen . . . We know however . . . that FitzStephen landed on Bannow Island and Strongbow at or near Passage in Co. Waterford . . ."

The crops grown, or suitable to be grown, are specified in respect of almost every group of lands forming the respective estates within five baronies. Wheat, rye, barley and oats are of frequent repetition. Where the soil was good for all sorts of corn, as well as pasture, the fact is pointed out. "Good pasture" and "indifferent good pasture" are so distinguished. Land in Shelburne barony (p. 171) was reported good for "black corn, barley, and some wheat, but very barren of grass and hard pasture for cattle."

Throughout the barony of Bantry these notes are given at the end of the parish returns and are of a summary nature. Thus at Rosdroit (p. 218) there is this description: "The soyle is barren and yields no corn without improvement being covered over with heath and firs, but it is adorned with goodly woods for main timber fit for building and for pipe staves, hogghead and barrell staves."

It is regretted that such particulars are wanting in respect of Bargy, the barony with the most mills.

The position which tillage then occupied in the economy of the county is further illustrated by the high proportion of land returned as "Arable." Among the northern baronies that of Scarawalsh is pre-eminent in this connection; Ballaghkeen would appear to come next. Abstracting the detailed figures for this barony, though they are merely estimated acreages, it was found that of the total grouped as "Arable and Pasture" 86% represented the former.

Taken in conjunction with the other features noticed above, and of the further particulars of churches, abbeys, castles, mills and stone-houses, the text thus presents an intimate view of one territorial unit of the country, and of the life of its people, in mid-seventeenth century Ireland.

While the text for the barony of Forth is wanting it is hoped that the publication of this volume will occasion diligent search, particularly in private libraries, leading to its recovery. Meanwhile the happy circumstance of the boundary description of the barony having been copied into the Annesley collection of Books of Survey and Distribution from the Civil Survey, permits of its reproduction here.²⁰ This may also help in the identification of the missing text:

THE BARONY OF FORTH

"The said Barony of Forth in the County of Wexford is scittuated South from the Castle of Wexford bounded on the South East wth. the sea; about the middle of the said Barrony there runs up an inlet of water to a foard called Asaly which upon a straight Lyne is four miles from the said Castle; from the said Foard there runs an Isthmus or Necke of Land East about four miles further; at the poynt of wch. land there is a Forte called by the name of Roslare which secures the Harbour of Wexford; and from the said Forte the land falls of South East about four miles to a poynt called Greene Oare; which is much taken away with the sea, being bounded wth Clayey ground, from the said poynt it go [es] Southwest four miles to a poynt of land called Castletowne alias Mollirdockes bounded wth. a ledge of rocks which is the farthes part of the land of that Barony, Westward (and the nearest to Wales of any land in Ireland) which point is in a straight lyne from the Castle of Wexford, about tenn miles and from thence it takes its extent by the sea three miles due west, to the lands of Ballyhally in the barony of Bargie and there is devided by a great Lough called Loghsale which Lough extends itself from Ballyhally to the Castle of Lings-towne about two miles eastward; and from the Castle of Lingstowne there runs a small brooke direct North which hath its beginning at the bogge of Randolstowne and soe runs to the bridge of Bargie which brooke divides the two baronies of Forth and Bargie. Thence from the aforesaid Castle of the Bridge of Bargie (and little streame thereby) the limitts of the aforesaid Barony pointeth up to the topp of the mountaine called the mountaine of Fearth, Northward, leaving on the east the castle of Fardistowne and the Castle of Newcastle (in Bargie) on the west ; which said Barony of Bargie hath meared all along from the sea side to the aforesaid mountaine (being about eight miles) whence alsoe the bounds of this Barony come downe from the Top of the mountaine to Newbawne, including the lands of that towne, thence to Little Clonard and soe to Newtowne, thence to the windmill and Knocks of the Comons of Wexford, and runs downe to Peters Gate being the walles of Wexford, meared from the said mountaine with the barony of Shillmaliere, and Comons of Wexford on the Northside. This barony is divided into twelve Peeres six whereof (nearest the sea) are comonly distinguished and called by the name of the six Lower Peeres, the other six toward the mountain are called the Upper Peeres, the names of the first menconed Peeres are Carne-Island, Killraine, Kilscurran, Roslare and Tacumshan. The six last are Ballymore, Maglasse, Ballybrennan, Rathmacknee, Drynagh and Rahaspeck. Some of wch Peeres consists of three parishes, some two or one. The number of Parishes in the said Barony are two and twenty all which you will find particularly and distinctly sett downe by their names as followeth (vizt) . . .

In conjunction with this description there is also happily available the outstanding account of the barony, written about 1680 for Sir William Petty. Under the editorship of Herbert F. Hore it was printed in the Journal of the Kilkenny and South-East Ireland Archaeological Society for the year 1862-3 (pp. 53-84).²¹ It is entitled: "A briefe description of the Barony of Fort, in the county of Wexford, together with a relation of the disposition and some peculiar customs of the ancient and present native inhabitants thereof." From internal evidence it has been conjectured that it was written by a member of the well-known Wexford family of Synnot. Extending to some thirty printed pages this Description furnishes inter alia an account of the natural features of the barony, of freeholders specified by name, and a "Catalogue" of churches and religious houses many of which had been demolished. The barony is stated to have been very populous, to have contained numerous villages of narrow extent and farms few of which exceeded 200 acres. Describing the people as "very laborious and industrious" particularly as regards their agricultural employments, the whole barony "viewed in time of harvest represents a well-cultivated garden with diversified plotts." The religious character of the people is exemplified and their abstemious habits thus chronicled: "They never eate flesh on Fridays or Saturdays, few use eggs, butter or milk on Fridays [and] abstained always from flesh on Wednesday."

The habitations of the gentry and "plebians" are likewise described, the mansion houses of the former numbering 30: "Theyre houses built with stone-walls sclated ; having spacious halls . . . all howses at present having chimneys." Of the dwellings of the people "theyre habitations compleateleie built with mudwalls soe firme and high as they frequently raise lofts thereon . . ."

A quotation from this unknown author may also be given summarising, it would seem, what one would expect to find in detail if the Civil Survey for the barony of Forth were forthcoming.

"The said barony in longitude extends from the north-west part of the Commons of Wexford, inclusive, unto the extremest point of Carne, Kemp's Cross about ten miles. Its breadth, dilated from the west side of the mountain of Fort, six miles, comprehending by ancient computation 20,000 acres of arable land, naturally not fertile, but by the solicitously ingenious industry and indefatigable labour of the inhabitants soe improved and reduced to that fecundious perfection, that it abounds with all sorts of excellent Bread-corne and Graine, Gardens, orchards, fruits, Sweet Hearbs, Meadows, pasture for all sorts of cattle (wherewithall its plentifully furnished) not much inferiour, if not equivalent to the best in Ireland, though not generally soe great in body or stature . . ."

One cannot leave this interesting Description without noting the references (p. 75) to the good relations existing between the people of different religious persuasions in the barony prior to 1641, a happy circumstance which the author maintains continued during the commotions which followed. In this retrospective mood he recalls (p. 72) another matter pertinent to the Civil Survey text—the Commonwealth's Transplantation project: "None of the Cominalty or plebian natives of that Barony was transplanted or banished . . . only such as were signally known and accused to have persevered in their loyalty in bearing arms for his Majesty of England . . . Some gentry of that barony preferred exile before transplantation into Connaught confiding divine benignity would restore his sacred Majesty Charles 2 and settle him in his throne . . ."

Finally, in regard to this barony, students may be reminded of the researches of Mr. Philip H. Hore published in the Journal of the Ui Ceinnsealaigh Historical Society—The Past (Nos. 1-4). Mr. Hore's entries begin with the year 1173, some being derived from sources which were in the Public Record Office prior to 1922 and are no longer extant. The Annuaire for 1868-9 of The Journal of the Kilkenny Archaeological Society should also be consulted.²²

The text provides the genealogist with a wide range of names, those of native Irish proprietors characterising the three northern and north-eastern baronies of Gorey, Ballaghkeen and Scarawalsh; the expert will distinguish the Welsh-Flemish among the Normans and "New English" in the south of the county. Many Irish names in the first category represent descendants or assignees of the grantees under the Plantation by James I in 1611. Publication of the Civil Survey now permits convenient collation with the Calendar of Patent Rolls for that reign under different heads. Instances examined in one connection showed agreement in the grantees' surnames, lands and acreages.

Within the baronies of Bantry, Scarawalsh and Gorey some twelve Cavanaghs are returned as proprietors. This name furnishes a link with the erstwhile most powerful family in Leinster, and one of the most powerful in Ireland. Its former possessions may indeed also be said to be recalled by other textual names representing the succession to Cavanagh territories confiscated in national and local upheavals in the 16th century—Masterson, Wallop, Mountgarrett:

"The Kavanagh families descended from Donnell Reagh, namely those of Enniscorthy, Ferns and the sept of Morogh, lost their property and status by Tyrone's war. Art Buoy the younger of Ferns was slain by Heron in 1549, and Walter Galde of this family, who for a long time was the terror of Wexford, was executed in 1581. The last chief of this line, Donogh McCahir, was in rebellion in 1599. The property of this family with that of Sliocht Murogh was planted in the reign of James I. The line of Enniscorthy held somewhat longer. Donnell Spaniagh was the head of this family."²³

Two Cavanagh entries in the Civil Survey may be noted, both appearing at p. 214, parish of St. Mullins, barony of Bantry. Here "Morgan Cavanagh, Irish Papist" is returned as the proprietor of "Ballileigh" estimated to contain 500 acres. It is stated that these lands were held in the year 1640 as "the inheritance of Dowling Mac Morrogh Cavenagh." It would appear from a "Genealogical Table of the Clan Kavanagh"²⁴ that this Morgan Kavanagh was descended from "Dermot Lavdery" a son of Gerald Cavanagh, Lord of Ferns (ob. 1431) who had divided his lands between his three sons; this Gerald is shown to have been a brother of Donnell More Kavanagh, King of Leinster.

The second entry is in respect of "Bryan Cavanagh a Protestant" of Borris, Carlow county, whose lands of "Ballinecooligh" are estimated at 490 acres. The genealogical table quoted shows that this proprietor was descended from Cahir Mac Art Cavanagh, created Baron of Ballyane by patent dated 8th February 1553.²⁵ In this patent Cahir Mac Art is recognised as chief of his sept and of all the inhabitants of the countries of "McAmore, Edward Duffe, Fedorghe" and the Duffry.

The fate of the remnant of the possessions of this ancient and historic line belongs rather to a discussion of the Wexford Book of Survey and Distribution: some were confiscated, others were not.

Collation of the Civil Survey with the Calendar of Patent Rolls (James I) is useful in another connection—the determination of the changes in the names of proprietors during the intervening period. The absence of the name MacDamore [Mac David More]²⁶ in the present text is a case in point. Though some six persons of this name appear in the Calendar as receiving grants from the Crown (1612–20), the Civil Survey shows that the lands so granted were in other hands in 1641. This circumstance appears to confirm the representations made in an undated petition to the English Privy Council by Redmond McDamore on behalf of himself and of the gentlemen and freeholders of McDamore's country which was in the barony of Ballaghkeen.²⁷

The petition may be briefly summarised. Having reassured themselves of regrants, the petitioners surrendered their lands in 1609 under the Defective Titles Commission; through the action of undertakers who had obtained grants of their lands a commission had been appointed to investigate the King's ancient title derived from Viscount Beaumont; that it was not until the jury was conveyed to Dublin where its membership was increased, and where it was censured in the Star Chamber that the "long slept title" was found. The petition concludes "that Sir E. Fisher obtained an injunction to dispossess the petitioners of their lands which they and their ancestors held by descent time out of mind, which was executed in March last in most rigorous manner by soldiers with force and arms, to the great amazement and utter ruin of the petitioners, their wives and families being many thousand souls. They held by descent and not by tanistry. They ask for a grant of their lands as surrendered."

It should be explained that Sir Edward Fisher had obtained a grant in the MacDamore country of 2,000 acres in 1611; this was surrendered and a new grant issued later.²⁸

Hore makes the following comment:²⁹

²⁹ Op. cit. p. 464.

"We cannot find any reply to, or compliance with the requests of this petition. It will be noticed the petitioners claim to hold by descent. Sir George Carew, Governor of Munster towards the close of Queen Elizabeth's reign asserts that the MacDamores and MacVaddocks of the county Wexford were of English descent, but according to the Book of Leinster these two families are descended from Murchadh na nGall (Dermod of the English), that is, Diarmaid Mac Murchadha, or MacMurrough, King of Leinster. . . The names of MacDamore and MacVaddock are at present [1911] unknown in the country of Wexford, the former being disguised under the anglicised form of Davis, and the latter under that of Maddock."

Bearing on the date of the above petition it is observed that the Lord Deputy Chichester who visited Wexford in the summer of 1612, at the King's request, refers in a letter addressed to Sir Humphry May, dated 13 September, 1613, to complaints that were being made against him "for the dispossessing and pityful usage of 60,000 souls supposed to be turned out of their ancient dwellings and freeholds, and forced to lye upon the ground."³⁰

No doubt there were many protests received, but this report of the Lord Deputy to the Chief Groom of the King's privy chamber savours much of the substance of Redmond McDamore's petition and so far helps to establish its approximate date.

The grants to the MacDamores in the Calendar of Patent Rolls³¹ relatively of lands of small extent, can scarcely be regarded as a consequence of the above petition, if this was presented circa 1612. Attention may, however, be called to the names of the proprietors returned by the Civil Survey in respect of lands passing under one of these grants. First the name of the grantee under letters patent of 30 March 1618, passing certain lands "in McDamore's country": Gerald McEdmond McDamore, gentleman.³² At p. 38 of the Civil Survey, parish of Ardmaine, barony of Ballaghkeen, the proprietor of part of the lands³³ so granted is stated to be Oliver McGerrott Redmond. It is for genealogists to confirm or otherwise whether this proprietor represented a son of the patentee and a grandson of Redmond McDamore of the petition. Other lands in the same patent, and located in the same parish and barony are returned by the Civil Survey in the possession of John Redmond.³⁴

Hore doubtless had evidence to support his statement that the McDamore name had been disguised under that of Davis in his time.

As regards the other family of McVaddock (McVadick) referred to by Hore, its possessions, as at the year 1641, are returned by the present text under "Wadocke," in the Barony of Gorey, reference to their possessions being given in the index at the end of the barony under the name "Vadick." The name McVadock occurs in The Description of Ireland, 1598, where the editor, Father Edmond Hogan, has a note (p. 63) to the effect that the person of this name referred to in his text as one of the "Principall Gentlemen" of the county Wexford was descended from Murchadh a brother of Dermot McMurrough; he gives, at the same time, a similar descent for McDamore, also in the category of county gentlemen.

One final instance in connection with this name may be noted. By patent³⁵ of 6 July

1612 a third share in the lands of Ballygarrett, Ballyowen and Ballinecoole in the territory of Kilcheele was granted to each of the following persons: (1) Tirlagh boy McEva McVadick, (2) Morish McGerald McVadock and Donogh McGerald McVadick and (3) Owen McDonnell Roe McVadick—their total shares amounting to 395 acres

At p. 6 of this volume the foregoing lands are returned within the parish of Killinugh, barony of Gorey in the joint ownership of Tibbott Wadocke, Morish Wadocke and Owen McDonnell Cavanagh, the acreage given being similar to that quoted above. It is not perhaps unreasonable to assume that the last-named had succeeded to the share of Owen McDonnell Roe McVadick and that in this instance the latter name had become merged in that of Cavanagh.

Other Irish names surviving in the Civil Survey proprietorial classification are "Morchoe" of which there are some ten in Ballaghkeen and Gorey, twelve "O'Breines" in Scarawalsh and inter alios "Kinshelaghs" Doyles, Dorans and O Dorans, this last recalling hereditary brehons of Leinster. The textual indexes of both "Irish Papists" and "English Protestants" for Gorey barony should be consulted in regard to the latter names.

* * * *

Though the separate return of Church lands is not available some textual annotations may be helpful. They consist of references such as "Entered in ye Booke of Bishops Land" or "Vide in libro episcopali." These appear either in the column reserved for proprietors' names or in the matter descriptive of denominations or townlands.³⁶ A partial clue is therefore provided as to the position as at the year 1641. Two references are in respect of Church lands in Ferns parish. The first is to a group of lands returned in the tabular sections on p. 266 as containing 600 acres and shown to be in the proprietorship of Edward Masterson, "Irish Papist"; of these lands it is stated that they were anciently Bishop's land and reputed to be a parish in themselves; there is the further revealing note that these lands were estimated to contain at least 2,000 acres; this suggests that the first acreage quoted had been derived from a Crown grant. It will be observed that the boundary description was interrupted by these observations and was continued on the next textual page.

The second comes at the end of the foregoing descriptive matter on p. 267, where for particulars of "The Lowertowne of Ferns and the lands threunto belonging, vizt. Kilborow Kilthomas and Bolinasboge . . ." reference is directed to the Book of Bishop's land.

In his final volume (pp. 283-6) Hore prints from the Wexford Book of Survey and Distribution details of lands belonging to the Bishopric of Ferns and Leighlin and of the glebes attached to the different parishes. This compilation represents the position after the Restoration when the Lord Bishop Boyle, according to Hore, secured "a liberal grant of lands out of the estates of the Roman Catholic gentry." In this connection should be recalled the provisions of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation directing that (1) the lands and revenues of which ecclesiastical persons had been deprived "through the fury and violence of the late times" should be forthwith restored, and (2) that such augmentations should be made to ecclesiastical persons out of such lands as were formerly held or reputed to be held in fee farm of any bishop

under rent or other duty or service.³⁷

Erck³⁸ furnishes a concise account of the ancient See lands and of their alienation specifying numerous fee-farm grants made between 1540 and 1588. Hore quotes Bishop Ram's return to the Regal Visitation of 1615 showing that the revenues had fallen from £500 per annum to £66 . 6 . 8 at the time of his advancement in 1605 ; the reasons given by Bishop Ram at a Visitation of 1622 are also printed by Hore in his final volume (p. 257) : that all the manor lands had been alienated either in fee or by long leases by several of his predecessors, notably Alexander and John Devereux ; that chief rents had been diminished and that 16 plowlands in Monebat and Rathanan had been utterly lost to the See. He had recovered the manor of Fethard and also the townland of Hivington [? Havenstown] by law which Hugh Allen had leased to Edward Devereux.

The position at the date of the Civil Survey is indicated by another source.

Church lands with other forfeited lands, were directed to be admeasured by the Commonwealth government, and Petty's return is printed in Larcom's History of the Down Survey (p. 139). Here the acreage of church lands in each barony of the county as admeasured by him in 1656, is specified, the total thereof being 6,763 plantation acres. Save for glebes, there were no Church lands admeasured in Gorey, Bantry or Shelburne baronies. The names of the lands surveyed in the remaining regions are here given³⁹ except for the barony of Forth ; the Church lands of this barony are specified in the course of Appendix A. (p. 299-307).

In the augmentation grant made in 1667 to the Lord Bishop of Ferns of lands representing 4,814 statute acres it is observed that the first places specified—Sledagh and Polmanagh—were lands which had been alienated from the See of Ferns by fee farm lease in 1548.⁴⁰ Doubtless evidence was forthcoming as to the alienations of other lands included in the Lord Bishop's grant ; to facilitate collation with the Civil Survey and to aid in the determination of ancient See lands an abstract of the augmentation grant is given here.⁴¹

Students of Wexford history will ever be indebted to Herbert F. Hore and to his son Philip for their monumental work, and to the latter particularly for having made available, in six volumes, the results of many years of arduous research. These may be said to constitute regional surveys preparatory to a general history of the county, which regrettably failed to materialise notwithstanding the author's intentions. In conjunction with these volumes there is also available the Hore collection of MSS., a catalogue of which is printed as Appendix B. (p. 315) to this volume.

Of the period contemporaneous with the Civil Survey many documents are printed in the first, fourth and fifth volumes; these were transcribed prior to 1922 in the old Public Record Office, Dublin, and are now the one likely available source for the subjects to which they relate. As an alternative to the Civil Survey for the town of Wexford attention is directed to a "Booke of Valuation," circa 1663-4, printed in the fifth volume, pp. 338-54. This gives an account of each house in the town, its length and breadth, and parochial location with the names of the proprietors in 1641; the names of the existing tenants—Wexford had been reserved to the State by the Act of 26 September 1653—whom Hore says were mostly Cromwellians, and the letting value. A similar "Valuation" it may be added, of the town of Fethard is printed in the fourth volume pp. 333-4.⁴²

Scattered through his volumes, related to particular localities, Hore prints very many documents of the Commonwealth period—orders, petitions and so forth. Amplification here of Dunlops Calendar of Documents may be noted. For example on pp. 508-9 of Hore's sixth volume an Order dated 31 December 1656 addressed to the High Sheriffs of Leinster directing that returns be made of transplantable persons, who had remained untransplanted, is given in full. No returns in this connection had been received from several counties including Wexford; the particulars required were to be furnished in accordance with the method of the "printed form" then sent. What was projected is here indicated by particulars being called for in respect of the "wives, children, or next heirs" of those who had already transplanted and who had not removed themselves.

In the same volume (pp. 502-6) three lists of transplantable persons are printed. In the first which includes a column headed "Date of Inquisition, 1653," the substance of each transplanter in either stock or tillage is given, together with the number of persons by whom the transplanter was to be accompanied. The stock of "Joane Sutton" of "Ballycarrocke" [Ballykeeroge in Shelburne], who would be accompanied to Connacht by 225 persons, is of interest: 240 acres of winter corn, 400 acres of summer corn, 218 cows, 80 garrans (ploughing horses), 200 sheep and 100 goats.

Collation with the Civil Survey (p. 186) shows that William Sutton, "Irish Papist" was the owner in 1641 of Ballykerogemore on which stood "A large castle."

There can be but few types of Anglo-Irish documents emanating from official sources and of importance for the study of local history of which there are not specimens in Hore. "Like its predecessors," states the author in his introduction to the fifth volume, "this work is based on a series of chronicles extracted from the Rolls and the State Papers principally." From the thirteenth century onwards, Memoranda Rolls, Plea Rolls, Exchequer Rolls, Ministers' Accounts and other sources are generously abstracted and translated. South Wexford, notably the barony of Shelburne, is the terrain of the first three volumes. In his introduction to the fourth Mr. Hore states: "This volume completes the history of the barony of Shelburne, the richest (although the smallest of all the baronies in Wexford) in the ruins of Abbeys, Castles, etc., comprising the monasteries of Dunbrody and Tintern, two præceptories of religious knights, the extinct boroughs of Clonmines and Fethard and the important Fort of Duncannon . . . It is doubtful if another district of equal area in broad Ireland is haunted by so many ancient memories and associations . . ."

⁴² Similar "Valuations" of Cork and Waterford cities were published in the sixth volume of the present series; these were made in pursuance of the Act 14 & 15 Chas. II, sec. IX, which directed the satisfaction of arrears of pay due to soldiers in the service of Chas. I before June 1649 out of inter alia all houses and tenements in walled towns not already set out to adventurers.

In the final volume in which it was announced that the publication of a general history of the county had been abandoned, Mr. Hore observes with regard to the northern territory of Gorey: "Nothing to record from 1296 until the district was created a barony in 3 James I." and again: "The history of the north of the county is also as nearly as possible a history of the Clan Kavanagh and in a minor degree that of the Clan O'Byrne." In this final volume (p. 466-7) the author further observes that many names of townlands on the Patent Rolls of James I "cannot now be identified with their present names." The Civil Survey which Mr. Hore would have found helpful was at the period of his compilation in the Quit Rent Office, and though he was aware that such a Survey had been made—having utilised the copies in the British Museum—the text formerly at Headfort, Kells, was apparently not examined by him.

For the identification of many Wexford place-names in feudal documents, students are indebted to Dr. Eric St. John Brooks' Knights' Fees in Counties Wexford, Carlow and Kilkenny (13th-15th Century).⁴³ The documents on which this Commentary is based derive from the circumstances of the partition of Leinster in 1247 among the daughters of Earl William Marshall whose sons had all successively died without issue. Each parcener or her representative received a separate County Palatine as the purparty or partitioned share, with all the liberties and prerogatives formerly enjoyed by Strongbow and the Earl Marshal in the entire seigniory of Leinster. Wexford, then a lordship, was duly allocated and remained a County Palatine until the Statute of Absentees 28 Henry VIII.

The successive feodaries, transcribed by Dr. Brooks, contain the names of the military tenants, the extent or number of their fees and place-names. These latter he for the most part identifies and discusses the feudal descents. The preliminary particulars of the feodaries are accompanied by the modern names of the places concerned, with their parochial and baronial location; this is at once a guide to the area under identification.

Here emerge in their feudal relationship very many names which will be found to have survived in a proprietorial classification in the Civil Survey returns of four hundred years later—Barry, Keating, Wadding, Devereux, Synnott, Hay and a host of others

Knights' fees are identified by Dr. Brooks in each of the eight baronies of the county. The names of former Wexford baronies and territories appear rendered phonetically in the language of the day: Keir, Shyrmall, Duffr. "The limits of the Barony of Keir" states Dr. Brooks (pp. 43-4) "may be deduced from the first charter (1231-4) of Taghmon . . . its extent can be indicated roughly as including the parishes of Rosdroit, Clonmore, Ballyhoge, Killurin, Whitechurchglynn, Ardcanrisk, Kilbrideglynn and perhaps Doonooney . . ." These parishes will be found within the Civil Survey baronies of Bantry and Shelmaliere. The Fees identified are of the years 1247, 1307, 1324 and 1425.

What Dr. Brooks has thus achieved for the feudal history of Wexford is a desideratum for later documents of record, notably the Patent Rolls of James I. Hore's observations have already been quoted in this connection as to the difficulty of the identification of places. Wexford lands, the subject of grants during this reign, are usually described as residing within a particular native territory or district which may have expanded or contracted during preceding centuries. Names of "countries" frequently appearing include MacDamore, Kinselagh, Murrowes, Duffrey, Bracknagh, Kilhobuck, Kilcheele, Rahins and so on. The patents of course also specify the names of the individual lands and their acreages. It is hoped that the publication of the Civil Survey will stimulate the parochial and baronial identification of these localities whose bounds were apparently very well known in the 17th century.

A desirable undertaking for Wexford, as well indeed as for other counties is the superimposition and reproduction of the Down Survey on the six-inch Ordnance Survey maps. A distinguished lead has already been given in this connection by the great Irish scholar John O'Donovan, who superimposed the Down Survey of 1656-7 for Antrim and Derry on the Ordnance Survey six-inch sheets for these counties. By this process the revolution which has taken place in the rendering of place-names, the changes effected in parish and barony boundaries or by the creation of new parishes, the re-emergence of old parishes united from time immemorial are brought to light, it may be said, at a glance. Supplementing and vastly expanding O'Donovan's achievement is the collection of Quit Rent Office maps at present located in the Public Record Office, Dublin. For official purposes most if not all of the denominations of land the subject of the Down Survey—comprehending most Irish counties—were superimposed on six-inch maps. This exceptional cartographical undertaking executed at the hands of qualified draughtsmen and representing the labour of many years was largely based on all that had survived, prior to 1922, of the original Down Survey, now no more. This means in effect that, with certain qualifications, the main work of superimposition has been done and it is gratifying to learn that the Irish Manuscripts Commission has under consideration a proposal to make it available for the purposes of local history.

An instance of the significance of the superimposition of the Down Survey may be given. There is first to be noted the parish of Ballymagire in the barony of Bargy at p. 149 of the present volume; likewise the specification, on the same page, of the names of the townlands comprising the parish one of which is also called Ballymagire. This parish and townland name likewise appear on the Down Survey map which when superimposed on the relevant 6" Ordnance sheet shows a striking variation of place-names, Killag taking the place of the former parish name and Richfield that of the old denomination of Ballymagir. A similar instance of the disappearance of the name of a parish and of the townland from which it apparently derived its name is that of St. Imoge (p. 152).

The wide powers given by Government to the Boundary Survey authorities comprehended the transfer of townlands from one parish to another, similarly of parishes from one barony to another, and finally of parishes and townlands to counties other than those to which they had formerly belonged.⁴⁴ At an early stage in these proceedings townlands of the baronies of Scarawalsh and Ballaghkeen were transferred to the barony of Gorey.

⁴⁴ The code of legislation begins with the Act of 1825—6 Geo. IV, cap. XCIX, continued by 6 & 7 Wm. IV, C. 84, etc. Under this legislations detached portions of baronies included or insulated in other baronies were in future to form integral parts of the baronies in which they were contained; there was a similar provision as to counties.

Thus it would seem that while the Ordnance Survey school of Gaelic scholars was reviewing local history for the purpose of establishing a standard of orthography for place-names, the Boundary Surveyors were revising the old geography of the country for the purposes of local and imperial taxation.

There is the further consideration that the recognised geographical division of the country prior to the Boundary Survey revision, in so far as it entered into contemporaneous records and documents would be misleading to investigators of later periods unfamiliar with the revisions which had taken place. For example the part parish of Arklow returned by the present text (p. 12) as within the barony of Gorey appears on the O. S. map and in the Census returns as part of the parish of Kilgorman. Descendants of emigrants from this area having only the parish name to guide them might well be baffled if they sought exclusively among the records of Wicklow for evidence of their forebears.

In the regrettable absence of Ordnance Survey memoirs the topographer and the genealogist are alike without ready guidance in these matters and to add to their difficulties revised Ordnance Survey maps issued since 1898 do not show parish boundaries nor is the parish any longer the unit of Census returns.

These are the immediate reasons for making available the old and the new geography of Ireland by the method which has been proposed and indicated above. There is the further desideratum and moreover a matter of prime importance: the reconstruction of the Down Survey itself by collation with what has survived of the original maps in different connections.

In addition to the sources for Wexford history given by Hore and Brooks and in the pages of the Journal of the Ui Ceinnsealaigh Historical Society—The Past, the student has now available for consultation the recent Reports of the Trustees of the National Library furnishing lists of manuscripts in Ireland and abroad copied by microfilm or "photostat." The carriage of many Wexford proprietors during the war begun in 1641 was the subject of inquisition after the Restoration; this is given in the well-known volume of the Irish Record Commission for Leinster. It may be noted here that by an inquisition taken at Enniscorthy on 2 June 1663

" Philip Hore late of Ballyshellane in the County of Wexford, gentleman, was possesst of all the estate that Phillip Hore his father had in the said county and received the issues and profits thereof—The said Philip the younger was in actual rebellion, and had a foote company under his command; and at the beginning of the rebellion was of the age of 16 years and capabel to carry arms."

O'Hanlon's catalogue of the Ordnance Survey collection for Wexford, printed at pp. 392-97 of the Journal of the Kilkenny Archaeological Society, Vol. I, New Series (1856-57)⁴⁵ provides a valuable guide to many sources. He adverts, inter alia, to fading calligraphy: "The Extracts are from the 'Irish Calendar' (Irish and English character) referring to saints supposed or known to have had a connexion with the county of Wexford) . . . from Colgan's Acta Sanctorum (English translation with English comments in pencil-marks by Dr. O'Donovan, and almost obliterated)—en passant, it would be desirable . . . that some careful and competent scribe would retrace these characters in ink, as they are of much historic value . . .” O’Hanlon also notes that O’Donovan’s letters written from Gorey in 1840 were illustrated by Wakeman in “eight beautiful pen-and-ink sketches of old remains.” He has also listed the tracings of maps of the county Wexford contained in the second volume of Extracts : “the first taken from Mercator’s ‘Atlas’ ; the second do ; the third from Speed’s ‘Ancient Map’ 1610 ; the fourth, do ; the fifth Map of County Wexford from Down Survey ; the sixth from the Railway Map and the seventh, a coloured hand-traced Map of the county of Wexford with the names of a few localities marked in the Irish character.”

⁴⁵ Vol. IV. (consec. series) R. S. A.I.

With the present volume the publication of the Civil Survey text formerly in the Quit Rent Office concludes. This series in MS. form, now in the P.R.O., consists of over eighty large folio volumes each representing a particular barony. Subdivided into provinces there are 34 volumes for Munster, 13 for Ulster and 35 for Leinster—constituting a third of the counties of Ireland. This collection has now been published in nine closely-printed quarto volumes with many appendices including supplementary texts for Muskerry barony, county Cork and for the city of Kilkenny, acknowledged at the time. It is hoped to make available at an early date, in a supplementary volume, the Civil Survey barony boundary descriptions entered in the Annesley set of Books of Survey and Distribution brought to light within recent years ; another discovery has been a copy of the text for the whole barony of Louth, co. Louth.

The invaluable help afforded to me by the late Very Rev. Professor T. Corcoran, S.J., D.Litt., will be ever a treasured memory. Father Corcoran read all my introductions up to the seventh volume, his suggestions on each occasion adding to my deep indebtedness to him. The guidance of the late Mr. James Morrissey, Deputy Keeper, P.R.O., has already been acknowledged. For reading this final introduction and for helpful suggestions the Very Rev. Professor J. Ryan, S.J., D.Litt., has earned my special thanks. To Mr. Diarmid Coffey, Assistant Deputy Keeper, P.R.O., I have also to express my gratitude for facilities afforded in many connections ; likewise to the Directors and staff of both the National Library and the Ordnance Survey. For his help in proof-reading and compilation of appendices for the present volume my grateful thanks are due to Mr. Breandán Mac Giolla Choille.

From the outset, until her death, I had the devoted assistance of my late wife both at the Quit Rent Office and in my home. In the essential collation of the transcript of the text before dispatch to the printer I had her constant and valuable help as likewise in proof-reading and in all matters pertaining to the preparation of the early volumes for publication.

May the whole work be DO CHUM GLÓIRE DÉ AGUS ONÓRA NA HÉIREANN.

Commission for Surveying of Lands.¹

THE said Commissioners,² by virtue of the authority and trust committed unto them in and by one Act of Parliament,³ entitled, "An Act for the speedy and effectuall Satisfaction of the Adventurers for Lands in Ireland, and of the Arreares due to the Souldiery there, and of other publique Debts," do hereby authorize and appoint Henry Waddington, James Shane, Henry Greenoway, and Sebastian Brigham, Esqrs.,⁴ or any three or more of them, to hold and keep one or more courts of survey, for inquiring and finding out of all and every the honors, baronies, castles, mannors, messuages, lands, tenements, rents, annuities, reversions, remainders, possessions, and other hereditaments whatsoever, which at any time since the twenty-third day of October, in the year 1641, did belong unto any person or persons, whose lands upon the said 23rd day of October were, or at any time since are forfeited to the Commonwealth by vertue of an Act of Parliament, entitled, "An Act for the speedy and effectual Reducing of the Rebels in his Majestie's Kingdome of Ireland to their due Obedience to his Majestie and the Crown of England,"⁵ or by any other Act or Acts of Parliament,⁶ and likewise to inquire of and find out all such honors, baronies, castles, manors, lands, tenements, rents and hereditaments belonging unto the Crown in the year 1630, or at any time since; and also to inquire of and find out all honors, baronies, castles, mannors, lands, tenements, rents, or other hereditaments, lately belonging to any archbishop, bishop, dean, dean and chapter, or other officer, belonging to that hierarchy in Ireland, in the right of his archbishoprick, bishoprick, deanery or office aforesaid, within any of the baronies of Kilkeny, Rathconrath, Demifoore, Moyashell or Moycashell, Moygoish, Corkerry, Delvin, Ffarbill, territory of Birrawny, lands of Moydrum, within the county of Westmeath, together with all houses, edifices, timber, woods, mines, and other appurtenances belonging to all and every the premises within the county and places aforesaid; and to survey the same and make returne thereof distinctly by themselves, that is to say, fforfeited lands, with the appurtenances, by themselves; Crown lands, with the appurtenances by themselves; and lands belonging to the said hierarchy, by themselves. In the holding and keeping of which courts of survey, the said Henry Waddington, &c., or any three or more of them, are hereby authorized and required to send for such persons as they shall judge any way able to informe them concerning the premises to come before them, and examine the said persons, upon oath, for the better discovery of what they know in and about the said premises. And it is further ordered, that in making returns of the said survey the said Henry Waddington, &c., doe observe and put in execution the instructions hereunto annexed ; and that before they doe act anything by vertue of this commission, they doe take the oath ensuing, viz. : “ You shall faithfully promise and swear, in the presence of the great and mighty God, that you shall well and truly execute the power and trust to you committed, by vertue of this commission and instructions, according to the best of your skill and knowledge.” And the said Henry Waddington and James Shane are to administer the said oath each unto other. And they, or any one or more of them, having so taken the said oath, are hereby authorized to administer the same unto the rest of the persons hereby appointed for the execution of this commission and instructions, as aforesaid.

DATED AT DUBLIN, THE 2ND OF JUNE, 1654.

Instructions to be observed by Henry Waddington, James Shane, Henry Greenoway, and Sebastian Brigham, Esqrs., in the Holding and Keeping of Courts of Survey of the Honors, Baronies, Castles, Lands, Tenements and Hereditaments, in and by the annexed Commission given them in Charge to survey, and in the surveying of the same accordingly.

You are forthwith, upon receipt of your commission, to meet in some convenient place within the said county, to take the oath prescribed in your said commission, for the due execution of the trust thereby committed unto you, and to consider in what barony or place you shall judge it most convenient to appoint the first court of survey to be kept, in order to the prosecution of your said commission, and accordingly to appoint time and place for that end. And for the more effectual performance of the said service, you are authorized to adjourne from time to time, and from place to place, in such manner as you shall judge to be most conducible to the speedy and effectually discharge of the said work. And in the first place you are to survey, according to the tenor of your commission and these instructions, the baronies of Clonlownan, Moycashell, Moygoish, Corkerry, Delvin, Ffarbill, territory of Birawny, and lands of Moydrum adjoining thereunto, being the baronies that are fallen by lot to the souldiery within the said county.

You are with all convenient speed to enter into and upon all and every the honors, baronies, manors, castles, messuages, and other the lands, tenements, and hereditaments whatsoever mentioned in your commission, lying within the said county of Westmeath. And by your oathes of good and lawfull men, and by all other lawfull wayes and meanes, you are to inquire and find out the premises, and every of them, with their and every of their appurtenances. And you are to view and survey the same, or cause the same to be viewed and surveyed, so as the premises and every of them may (either by your own view, or by the view and testimony of good and lawfull persons, upon oath) be certainly, distinctly, and entirely known from other lands, by their respective qualities, quantities, or number of acres by estimation (according to one and twenty foot to the perch, and one hundred and sixty perches to the acre), also by their names, scituacion, parish, or place where the same doe lye, with their respective meets and bounds ; the bogs, woods, and barren mountains; belonging to the respective premises, or any of them, being mentioned, and the quantity thereof estimated and distinguished from the profitable lands in the said survey. And for the better execution of your said commission, you are, as often as you see cause, to summon one or more juries, and to give them in charge to inquire and find out all and every the particulars of these instructions, and to cause such juries, when and as often as you shall judge if necessary, to view and tread the meets and bounds of the premises, and to forme all such other matters and things as are perfectly inquirable in courts of survey, as you shall give the same in charge unto them.

You are, by the like waies and meanes, to inquire of and find out the true yearly value of the premisses, and of every of them, as the same were lett for, or worth to be lett, in the year 1640, or at any time before ; and also what part of the premisses are chargeable with any pious and charitable use or uses ; and also to inquire of and survey, or cause to be surveyed, the buildings, houses, edifices, timber, woods, open quarries, or mines, upon the premises—and to make true and particular returns of the same in your bookes of survey.

You are to call before you all such persons as now are, or formerly have been, stewards, bayliffs, reeves, or collectors of rents, issues, revenues or profits of the premises, or any part thereof ; and likewise all such persons as now are, or formerly have been, tenants of the premises, or any part thereof, and also such other persons as you conceive may best know the premisses, or any of them, or as many of the said persons as you can conveniently summon to appear before you, and to examine them upon oath concerning the meets and bounds of the premisses, and concerning the rents, issues, profits, valuations, royalties, perquisites of courts, tythe, or impropriations, rights, titles, and other emoluments unto the premises, or any of them, belonging or appertaining, or held, or enjoyed with the same, as parte, parcell, or member thereof, or appendant to the same, together with their and every of their particular values, which you are distinctly to returne in your bookes of survey as aforesaid.

You are further strictly to inquire and examine as aforesaid what court-rolls, rentalls, bookes of survey, books of accompts, or what other records, evidences, or writings touching every the premises or any part of them, any of the said persons have come to the knowledge of ; and where and in whose custody the same do remayne ; which said court-rolls, rentalls, bookes of accompt, or other records, evidences, and writings you are to demand and receive into your custody.

In returning your survey of any honors, mannors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, belonging to the Crown, or to archbishops, bishops, deans, deans and chapters, or other officers belonging to that hierarchy, you are particularly to inquire, by your waies and means aforesaid, what leases are in being of any part of the said last-mentioned premisses, when the same did respectively commence, for what terme granted, to whom the same were so granted, what rents and other duties were reserved thereupon, who are the present tenants of such lands so granted, and in whose right they hold the same, and when and from whom such right is or hath been made over unto them, or unto the persons for or from whom they hold the same respectively.

In case you find variance in the evidence which shall be given, touching the extent or valuation of the premises, or any part of them, or any other particular given in charge, and if the said variation or difference bee considerable, or if you conceive the evidence to differ from truth to the prejudice of the Commonwealth, or any other person, you are in those cases, as well by your own view as by such other good waies and meanes as you judge fitt, to informe yourselves of the truth in such particulars, and to certify as well the said evidence at large as your own judgment touching those particulars with the reasons inducing you to vary from such evidence.

- Where you shall find no possibility, by reason of the wastnes or depopulation of the country, to make so particular a survey as is directed, or to inform yourselves so exactly of the meets, bounds, or other certenties of the premisses, or any of them, as is before required, you are in such cases to use your best wayes and meanes you can for the discovery of all and every the particulars herein given you in charge, and to certify upon all such particulars the manner of your proceedings and the causes why you cannot returne the said survey of them according to the instructions given you.

And because it is required that the quantity or number of acres contained in the premisses, and in every part or parcell of them, should be distinctly and particularly admeasured, you are, therefore, out of the survey taken by you of the premises, and every part of the same, to cause an abstract to bee drawn, containing the names of all and every such parcells of land as shall bee by you surveyed in every respective barony, according to the tenor of your commission, with their respective bounds and meets, and the parishes or places where the same do respectively lie, not mentioning the quantity or value of the same ; and the said abstract so drawn you are to deliver to such persons as shall be authorized and commissioned to admeasure the same. In which abstract you are to distinguish which of the said lands are forfeited lands, and also which lands are Crown lands, and which lands are lands lately belonging to any archbishop, bishop, dean, dean and chapter, or other officers of that hierarchy to the end the same may be distinctly admeasured, and distinct plotts returned of the same.

And for the better assistance of the said persons who shall be appointed to admeasure the premisses, or any part of them, you are hereby authorized and required by warrants under your hand, to appoint (out of the inhabitants of the said county), such and so many fitt persons as shall be judged necessary to attend the said surveyors in admeasuring of the premises, or any parts thereof, for to show and tread out the meets and bounds of any of the said lands respectively ; and also to informe and make known, as often as there shall be occasion, the meets of the several baronies and parishes, and the course that the said meets and bounds doe runne.

And for the more full and better discovery of the interest of the Commonwealth in or out of lands in the said county, you are further authorized and appointed to inquire what other lands in any of the baronies aforesaid are claymed by any English or Protestants, how meared, scituate, and bounded, and in what parishes or places respectively the said lands doe lye, what number of acres such lands so claymed do respectively containe by estimation, according to the measure of 21 ffoot to the pole, and 160 poles to the acre ; what leases, annuities, rents or other profits are made off, or is issuing or of right ought to issue out of the same to the Commonwealth, in right of any person or persons who have forfeited their interests in the same to the Commonwealth ; which you are likewise to return in your survey, therein setting down the particular yearly values of every such lease, annuity, rent, or other profit.

Having finished the survey of every the said baronies within the said county, according to the aforementioned rules and instructions given you, you are to cause the same to bee fairly ingrossed in one or more bookes, setting down the survey of each barony by itself, and to return the same, attested under your hands, or the hands of any three or more of you, together with this Commission, and instructions, close sealed up, to the surveyor-generall, and a duplicate thereof, in like manner fairly ingrossed, attested and sealed up, to the register for forfeited lands in Ireland,—at Dublin, together with all records, evidences, and writings which shall come to your hands concerning the premisses or any part of them. In the returne, transcription or making up of which survey, or in any other thing relating to the premisses, you are further to observe such instructions as shall bee sent you by the said commissioners of the Commonwealth, or by the surveyor-generall.

You are to use all expedition in the execution of the aforementioned instructions, that the service of the Commonwealth may not bee retarded thereby ; and for the more effectual performance of the severall duties herein directed, you are hereby authorized to employ such and so many persons under you for writing, ingrossing, and transcribing of such depositions, surveys, and duplicates, as you are to take and returne by vertue of the above said commission, and to give to each of them such allowance as you shall think fit, provided no unnecessary or immediate charge bee contracted thereby upon the Commonwealth ; and that no one person receive for his paines in writing or transcribing the depositions and surveys as aforesaid above the rate of twenty shillings per week.

Lastly, you are not without speciall lycense or order in writing from the said commissioners to discover to any person the particular values, extent, or the like certainties of the premisses to bee by you surveyed, according to this commission, other than what was before directed to such as shall bee appointed to admeasure any part of the said premisses, nor to keep any coppies of the same with your selves or with any of those that shall bee employed by you.

Note on the MS. Materials for the Civil Survey of 1654-56.

(Public Record Office and Quit Rent Office, Ireland).

In the Headfort Collection of Records purchased by the Commissioners of Woods Forests and Land Revenues of the Crown in 1837 there were several volumes (portion of a complete set) of the Civil Survey made of certain counties of Ireland in the year 1654-5; these volumes were then deposited in their Quit Rent Office, Dublin.

This Quit Rent Office collection of Survey Books included all the barony volumes for the Counties of Donegal, Limerick, Londonderry, Meath, Tipperary, Tyrone, Waterford, Dublin (except Newcastle and Uppercross), Kildare (except Ophaley), and Wexford (except Forth). Detailed lists of these barony volumes are given in a report on the Headfort Collection, printed in the Reports of the Irish Record Commissioners, Vol. II, pp. 21-24.

The Civil Survey was undertaken for seventeen other counties; but it would appear that any Surveys for these counties perished in the fire in the Surveyor-General's Office (Essex Street, Dublin), in 1711.

The Civil Survey consists of Returns of the extent and value of the forfeited lands. It contains very many facts not noted in the particulars and tables accompanying the subsequent mapped Down Survey which was throughout facilitated by the Abstracts made from the Civil Survey.

The Commissioners of Woods, Forests and Land Revenues, at the instance of Mr. J. Harper Scaife, the Superintendent of their Dublin Office, offered this Quit Rent Office Collection of Civil Survey Volumes to the Public Record Office of Ireland, on condition that copies of these Volumes should be prepared in the Public Record Office and furnished to them for constant use in the Quit Rent Office, Dublin.

Mr. James Mills, Deputy Keeper of the Records, gladly accepted the offer. Copies were prepared at the Public Record Office during the years 1900-1910, fresh batches of Civil Survey volumes being deposited there after copies of volumes in the previous batch had been furnished to the Quit Rent Office. By the close of 1910, this work was completed; all the original Civil Survey Books were deposited in the Public Record Office, and copies of them, as stipulated, had been furnished to the Quit Rent Office.

The Quit Rent Office also received a copy of an official copy of the Civil Survey of the barony of Clannorris, Co. Kerry, presented to the Public Record Office during the above period; the original Survey is not forthcoming.

These volumes were a very important addition to the Records of the Land Settlement under the Commonwealth already in the Public Record Office. They were then available for public inspection, with every facility. They were highly useful as regards local history and as to certain questions of title. They were specially valuable for topography, the Surveys of some counties being particularly rich in boundary names and place names now often obsolete, or till now unknown.

The principal reason for their transfer was that Records of such value ought to be deposited in the Public Record Office. There they perished in the Summer of 1922.

Happily the Civil survey copies furnished to the Quit Rent Office, and now deposited there, substantially counter-balance that loss; some of them were compared with the originals by Mr. James Mills, then Deputy-Keeper of the Records, and the remainder by the writer of this Note, then Certifying Officer. All may be accepted as true and authentic copies of the originals destroyed in the year 1922.

MS. MATERIALS FOR THE CIVIL SURVEY OF 1654-56.

THE CIVIL SURVEY (1654-6) was made for twenty-seven counties and comprehended the whole of Munster, with the exception of county Clare, the whole of Ulster, with the exception of the barony of Farney, county Monaghan, all of Leinster, and part of Connacht, namely, the county of Leitrim. What has survived, so far as can be ascertained, is exhibited in the following statement comprehending the whole or part of eleven counties. To this list is now added the Civil Survey of the barony of Muskerry, Co. Cork, that of Kilkenny city and that of part of Clanmaurice barony, Co. Kerry. In a supplementary volume will be made available the text for the barony of Louth, co. Louth, and the Civil Survey barony boundary descriptions entered in the Annesley set of Books of Survey and Distribution.

LIST OF MANUSCRIPTS	317

The outline Map of Wexford, showing Boundaries of Baronies A.D. 1655-56, prefixed to this volume, is intended to aid the historical student by showing the relative positions and extent of these historic divisions. A few modern place-names have been added to serve as additional guiding points.

The Civil Survey, A.D. 1654-56, was followed by the Maps of The Down Survey A.D. 1655-58 made under the direction of Dr. (later Sir) William Petty, Surveyor-General.

As for other counties, the eight large-scale Barony Maps of The Down Survey for Wexford have been reproduced, full size, from the set now in the Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris. They will be found most useful in connection with the Civil Survey Prices:—Uncoloured 3s. 6d. each; coloured as in the Paris Maps 7s. 6d. each.

The following Ordnance Survey maps and plans will in varying ways be also of use:—

COUNTY INDEX MAPS TO THE 6-INCH SHEETS—showing Barony and Parish boundaries (scales from $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles to 3 miles to 1 inch). Price 5s. od.

THE COUNTY "QUARTER-INCH" MAP. 1:253440—4 miles to 1 inch. (In sheets 18" x 12")—

- (a) In five colours—paper flat 2/6; folded and covered, 3/-; linen backed flat 3/-; folded and covered 3/6.
- (b) In two colours—paper flat 2/6; folded 3/6.

Sheets of the "HALF-INCH" MAP OF IRELAND; 1:126720— $\frac{1}{2}$ inch to 1 mile (in sheets 27" x 18")—Published in two forms—(a) Hillshaded, (b) layers. Prices (for both forms)—Paper flat 3/-; Paper folded and covered 3/6.

Sheets of the "ONE-INCH" MAP OF IRELAND. 1:63360—1-inch to 1 mile (in sheets 18" x 12"): In five colours—Paper flat 1/6; Paper folded and covered 2/6; Linen backed flat 2/6; Linen backed folded and covered 3/-.

In outline (with contours)—Paper flat 3/-.

Combined sheets of the coloured Edition in sheet sizes greater than 18" x 12" are available at prices ranging from 2/- paper flat to 3/6 linen backed folded and covered.

TOWNLAND MAPS (Published by Counties):

1:2500—25,344 inches to 1 mile (in sheets 36" x 24"—popularly known as 25-inch plans.

These plans show all classes of detail and the area of each enclosure is given in statute acres; price 7/6.

1:10560—6-inches to 1 mile (in sheets 36" x 24"): These sheets show all detail including field boundaries as in the case of the 1:2500 (25,344 inch) plans, except that the area of townlands only are given in statute acres, roods and perches; price 7/6;

All Ordnance Survey Publications may be purchased from the Ordnance Survey Office, Phoenix Park, Dublin; or the principal Agent: The Government Publications Sale Office, G.P.O. Arcade, Henry Street, Dublin; and Agents in principal cities and towns.

¹There is a correction here which leaves room for speculation. It appears that this place-name was first written Aghnebedinny and that later the letter between the i and final n was subjected to a correction. It now reads Aghnebedivny with a downstroke obliquely through the right arm of the v which may be either the cancelling of the remaining part of the original letter (probably n) or, less likely, the cancelling of the substituted letter.

APPENDIX A

(CIVIL SURVEY VOL. IX)

BARONY OF FORTH

(EXTRACT FROM THE WEXFORD BOOK OF SURVEY AND DISTRIBUTION)

BARONY OF FORTH, COUNTY WEXFORD

NOTE: As has already been noted in the Introduction, the barony of Forth is not included in the Civil Survey text now published for Co. Wexford. The Civil Survey text was, however, used in the compilation of the Books of Survey and Distribution; in order to provide the maximum information about the missing barony, an extract from the Wexford volume in the Q.R.O. series, P.R.O., is here given and the missing text in a measure restored. The columns whose captions are taken from elsewhere in the same series give the number of the plot in the Down Survey maps, the proprietors in the year 1641, the names of denominations of land, and the admeasured number of profitable and unprofitable acres. With the exception of the valuation of lands in 1641, the information here supplied is almost as full as that given in the columnar sections of the Civil Survey.

The extract is from pages 69 to 93 (inclusive) of the Wexford Book of Survey and Distribution; the original pagination is shown on the extreme right of the printed page. Each page of the text carries a note that it had been examined by F. Guybon, Deputy Clerk of the Quit Rents. An index to proprietors and an index to denominations of land have been prepared for this Appendix and in both cases reference is to the pagination of the original text.

List of MSS. Hore Collection

APPENDIX B

HORE COLLECTION

LIST OF MSS.

NOTE : The Hore collection has been described by competent authority as "forming a mass of material for local history as yet rarely approached in Ireland."¹ It represents the life-work of Herbert F. Hore and many years of fruitful labour by his son, Philip. Both were more than indefatigable collectors as their published works testify. To the Journals of the Kilkenny and Ulster Archaeological Societies Herbert Hore was a zealous contributor and with the Rev. James Graves joint-editor of an extra volume of the former Society : "The Social State of the South-East Counties of Ireland in the 16th century." After his death in 1865, at the early age of 48, the collection begun by him was added to by Philip H. Hore in the desire to complete his father's work. The final outcome of their combined research amongst the public and private collections of this country and of England was the "History of the Town and County of Wexford" edited by Philip H. Hore and published in six volumes over the years 1900-11.

The careful preservation of the collection was also at the hands of Philip Hore by whom a very considerable section of the MSS. was assembled in volumes and bound ; a catalogue likewise was prepared by him and printed. From a copy presented in 1877 to the library of the Royal Dublin Society—now in the National Library of Ireland—the reprint forming this appendix has been made by the courtesy of the Director.

It is also gratifying to record that the present custodian of the collection, The Very Rev. The President (Father O'Byrne), St. Peter's College, Wexford has kindly permitted the micro-filming of the entire collection, bound and unbound, by the National Library, Dublin.

The "List" or catalogue is divided into two sections, the first comprising the bound volumes numbered 1 to 67 ; the second describes the unbound MSS. contained in separate bundles and numbered 1 to 64.

It is not however to be assumed that all the documents forming the collection have been catalogued ; much, if not most, of the research of Philip Hore post-dated the original "List." Nor is it to be assumed that all those specified are now available ; some were loaned from the family residence at Pole-Hore, county Wexford, and never restored.

Such features are indicated partly by the text itself,² but more particularly by National Library staff annotations these revealing the existence of seven additional bound volumes thus bringing the total in this classification from 67 to 74. Within this revised numeration bound volumes 1-74 are stated by the authority quoted to be in St. Peter's College "except 3, 43, 63-7" of the catalogue.

Of these numbers 64-7 have been restored to St. Peter's College by the National Library, to which institution they had been presented by a private collector in 1929.

¹ The late Mr. James Mills, I. S. O., Deputy-Keeper, P. R. O. I. (1899-1914) : "Accounts of the Earl of Norfolk's estates in Ireland 1279-94" ; Journal R. S. A. I. vol. xxii (1892) p. 50.

² See items 35 and 36 "Bound Volumes."

The additional volumes not catalogued would appear to be the continuation of a series of five volumes indicated at items 6-10 of the catalogue; the contents of the former are noted by the National Library authorities thus:

- (No. of vol.) " 68 . . . 6th, vol. of transcripts from the Memoranda Rolls, 1405-71, 739 pp. indexed, illustr.
" 69 . . . 7th.
" 70 . . . 8th.
" 71 . . . 9th. 1635-66.
" 72 . . . Ministers Accts. of the lands of the Earl of Norfolk. Latin with trans. and notes.
" 73 . . . Co. Wexford Petitions 1697-1800.
" 74 . . . Extracts from Great Roll of the Irish Exchequer, 1273-1483."

We are likewise indebted to the National Library for particulars relating to the "Unbound MSS."

Of the 64 separate and numbered bundles in the catalogue, relating to the history of Ireland in general, 25 are indicated as wanting:

"In St. Peter's College marked as missing are Nos. 5, 7, 11, 13, 15, 17, 18, 20, 24, 31 32—all lent to Sir T. Esmonde, Ballynastragh, 3 Novr., 1904.

"No trace of the following numbers: 36, 38, 45, 48, 49, 52, 53, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 62, 63."

In connection with the latter items it may be mentioned that in the Journal of the R. S. A. I., 1893 (p. 213) there is a note intimating that Philip Hore was then desirous of disposing of his father's general collection and having "placed in hands able to make good use of them," the Wexford material to be reserved for the projected history of the county.

It is thought however that if any of the MSS. were then sold there would be some record of the transaction. While it is feared that some of the MSS. are beyond recovery, it is hoped with regard to others that the republication of the catalogue will stimulate inquiry as to their present location.

In the second introduction to the present volume reference is made to particular documents closely contemporaneous with the period of the Civil Survey, printed by Philip Hore in the course of his monumental work on Wexford. It should be noted that in addition to his six published volumes, being in the nature of regional surveys, it was also Mr. Hore's intention to contribute a further volume on the general history of Wexford county which, however, he did not live to carry out, dying in 1931, at the venerable age of 90.

For the voluminous material accumulated by both father and son students ever will be grateful and it is further hoped that the particulars here given of their MSS., in conjunction with the present volume, will facilitate the completion of the work these untiring investigators had in mind.
